(Excerpted and adapted from the original book.)

These exercises are based upon these principles:

1. That the child learns by example and practice: not by rules or theory.
2. That the habits of utterance which a child begins to form at the very outset will cling to him through life.

He should, therefore, before bad habits of speech and writing are formed, begin with the facts that lead up to general grammatical laws; not as ordinary textbooks require, with rules and definitions.

No examples of false syntax are given, because, so far as possible, we should not allow pupils to see or hear what is wrong in language. The children's mistakes in speaking and writing will be found ample for correction and illustration.

These exercises have been used in large graded schools with the most satisfactory results, and are now offered to teachers with the hope that they may be found useful in leading the "little ones" to correct expression of their thoughts in speaking and writing.

SECOND READER GRADE. — Pictures, choice stories, animals, letter-writing, etc., will be found valuable in language teaching. The oral statement of information obtained should precede the written.

The value of pictures as a means of cultivating thought and expression in children is not fully appreciated. Pictures awaken interest and convey ideas which the mind of young people can not grasp from simple print.

Introduction

And Instructions

I have observed that, if not corrected early-on, some habits of poor grammar and spelling can become like permanent marker on the walls of a young child's mind. Even though I agree heartily with the idea that children learn spelling and grammar best by reading and writing, my own children have needed more specific instruction. However, I'm not willing to overburden them with a complete English program in every grade. This repetition of the same information year-after-year kills the love of language in children.

I needed to find a program that was:

- Something I could put on "auto pilot"
- Quick (for kids who already had trouble sitting still for reading and math)
- Not technical
- Cheap and easy to put together (not too much printing, cutting, pasting, etc., etc., etc.)

Early-on I discovered Simply Grammar, an expanded version of Charlotte Mason's First Grammar Lessons. However, the work was meant to be done orally, which was too much work for a woman juggling children at six different levels at the same time.

Finally, I stumbled upon Dollar Homeschool in The Old Schoolhouse magazine. This company specializes in collecting school books from times past and making them available in digital form for modern use. These materials were written before the Progressive education movement in America, a time before humanism and its psychobabble began to rule the way children were taught.

Included on one of the CD's from Dollar Homeschool was a collection of grammar books, and in particular two which I found very interesting. These were written by a person by the name of C. C. Long and were entitled New Language Exercises for Primary Schools part one and part two (I like to refer to them as "Long's Language"). As I read through them I became more and more excited; this was finally the answer, the tool that would help fill the gap and turn my beginning readers into confident, competent writers!

For one thing, the first lessons are not about nouns and verbs. There is actually very little mentioned in the first book about grammar at all, although grammar is the subject. Instead, children are asked to write about themselves, where they live, etc. The lessons present sentences as "statements" including a subject and a predicate without ever mentioning the technical terms. Within the first 50 lessons, my little ones have been able to write short paragraphs that describe familiar objects such as a ball, a cow, etc.

For another thing, the lessons are oh, so short! The instructions are usually one or two sentences long, and the exercise is not more than six to twelve short sentences (that follow a formula, so there is not that much thinking involved). If a child is focused, which is easy to do because of the simplicity, the longest lesson takes less than 15 minutes to complete!

Besides all this, the work is mostly self-directed. The learning is gradual, no great leaps are expected from one day to another, so little instruction or oversight is necessary. This is certainly a win/win for us moms of many! My children come away from the lessons feeling accomplished and energized without feeling frustrated. Before I realize it they are well on their way to being successful writers!

After I published a post on my blog recommending this resource, I realized there was a way to make things even easier (both for me and for my readers).

So, I finally sat down with some computer software and began the process of taking the original book and re-engineering it for modern use.

The result is what you see here. As an answer to prayer, I was able to come up with a way that streamlined the lessons and created a work text of sorts, with the original directions and copywork presented with places directly adjoining for the child to complete the work. The instructions are included in each page – no extra searching, no lugging around a teacher's manual, no loss due to distraction between the printed page and the actual work.

While I tried to keep to the flavor of the original work, I did tweak the lessons in a few areas, including some correction where the wording was a bit too archaic. I also restructured some of the composition lessons and even wrote a few to add that were more appropriate where necessary.

You will probably want to spend a minute or two on each lesson just to make sure the instructions are understood, and I would also check up to make sure they are done with neatness (remember, a little done well is better than a lot done poorly).

 Dictation lessons are repeated on the last few pages for your convenience.*

Easy as pie, right?

Please note: You won't want your child to attempt this level until he/she has a good understanding of the different types of sentences and has a basic grasp of punctuation. If he is not used to these things, have him go through the first level of Gentle Grammar before you try this second level.

Blessings,

Sherry

Oh, let me thank thee; kind thou art,
To children such as I:
Give me a gentle, loving heart;
Be Thou my Friend on high.

Help me to please my parents dear,
And do whate'er they tell;
Bless all my friends, both far and near,
And keep them safe and well.

LETTER WRITING

Lesson 58. — A Letter.

Copy this letter on another piece of paper or in a notebook. Notice the use of capitals and marks of punctuation, and the arrangement of different parts. Copy the letter again, using the name of one of your friends, and sign your own name.

May 4, 1889

Dear Clara,

Tomorrow is my ninth birthday, and mother says I can have a party in the afternoon.

Brother Frank will put up a swing for us. I have a new set of dishes, and we will have a tea party in the back yard. Will you come? We expect to have a very good time.

Your friend,

Samantha
